

The Polk Family

Cecily is mom to three boys King (16), Robert (9), and Christian (4). She works at Riley's Outpatient Surgery Center as a surgical technologist and attends Providence AME Church.

Homeownership is by far one of the biggest leaps of blind faith I will ever experience in my life. I can remember watching my mother who was single with four children get her very first home built from the ground up. I remember her sleepless nights and all the sweat and tears she put forward to become a homeowner. I also saw the pleasure she took and the pride she had knowing that she was a homeowner and she achieved a goal that others thought she couldn't. I'd like to provide my three children with the same foundation, a place to really call home, and to also create long lasting memories in. The liberation I hear from other homeowners definitely pushes me to get out of apartment living and gain a space that I'm working to own. Seeing my children grow in a home is one thing I have desired for years but never thought that it could be obtainable for me. Once my children are in a house, we can finally have the space to sit and have meals at the table as a family comfortably and eat and not gather around the coffee table to sit. I can also be the first grandchild to actually become a homeowner. Family gatherings have a potential of being at my house without feeling cramped in my current living space. Being able to become a homeowner also is setting an example for my kids to see that hard work does pay off and it had a great end result.

“Seeing my children grow in a home is one thing I have desired for years but never thought that it could be obtainable for me.”